

University of Colorado Denver Annual Award for Excellence in Faculty Mentoring

Spring 2022

Purpose, Eligibility and Nomination, Submission, and Selection Processes

I. Purpose

The Annual Award for Excellence in Faculty Mentoring seeks to recognize the important role that faculty play in supporting their colleagues through supportive mentoring relationships. Mentoring is an integral part of encouraging faculty vitality and professional growth. Mentoring of other faculty involves not only professional support, but also personal and social aspects, and includes activities related to teaching, scholarship, service and academic career development.

II. Eligibility

The mentoring award will be given to a faculty member, employed for at least three years on the downtown campus, who has served as an exceptional mentor to other faculty. All faculty members who have served as a lecturer, instructor, senior instructor, or as an assistant professor, associate professor, or professor (CTT and TT/T) are eligible to be nominated or to nominate themselves. All nominated faculty members not initially selected as the awardee will be considered in the subsequent two years.

III. Nomination and Submission Processes

Step 1. Faculty members wishing to nominate themselves or a colleague for the Excellence in Faculty Mentoring award should submit the nomination form (attached) to Betsy Metzger (betsy.metzger@ucdenver.edu), faculty affairs senior coordinator in the Provost's Office by February 14, 2022. The nomination form includes a brief statement (<300 words) explaining why the individual should be considered for the Excellence in Faculty Mentoring award. The statement should provide examples of how the nominated individual has contributed to the professional development of faculty colleagues.

Step 2. Following the submission of the nomination form, nominees will be contacted and asked to submit:

- (1) a current vita;
 - (2) brief statement (< three pages) that articulates a mentoring philosophy/approach and provides concrete examples of mentoring work with other faculty with an emphasis on the past three years of mentoring;
 - (3) solicited letters from current or former mentees (maximum of three letters);
- and

- (4) contact information for two individuals who could serve as a reference and who could discuss the nature and impact of the nominees' mentoring work. While additional documentation is not required, nominees may include other pertinent materials (e.g., evidence of mentoring pairs' collaborative projects, co-authored presentations, papers, notes of support or appreciation).

The nominated faculty member should submit those materials to Betsy Metzger (betsy.metzger@ucdenver.edu), faculty affairs senior coordinator in the Provost's Office, by March 1, 2022.

Sample dossiers for this award are available in the Center for Faculty Development & Advancement (CFDA). Contact the Center at center.facdevelopment@ucdenver.edu or 303-315-3033.

IV. Selection Process

A. The review committee will consist of five faculty members involved in the CFDA mentoring program who have not nominated a candidate and have not been nominated themselves. Their review will be guided by the attached rubric and an awardee will be selected based on the strengths of the nominated faculty member's mentoring ability and the quality of the mentoring relationship(s).
